Merritt Bookstore Salon Show – running now through May 24th

The salon show at the Gallery at Merritt Bookstore opened Friday, April 29th and runs through May 24th. The Gallery is a newly renovated space on the second floor with a modern gallery hanging system. There are 31 photos from 12 different members. The show looks great – thanks to Ann, Brian, Lazlo, Scott, Moby and Jeff for help hanging. There were about 35 people at the opening which featured some refreshments and a wonderful DVD presentation titled "Deeply Mozart" presented by Francesco Attesti. The show looks great – stop by if you can!

Executive Committee Meeting – Tuesday, May 17th

We will have an Executive Committee Meeting before the regularly scheduled meeting on Tuesday, May 17th at 5:30 pm. We will start planning this summer's events, discuss proposals for next season's speakers and topics, review open positions and make nominations for open positions. Rick has stated that he wants to step down as President so we will need to elect a President and a Vice President for next season. If you are interested in either role, please reach out to Rick or myself. We will consider a co-presidency as well to help divide duties. THANK YOU to Rick for your leadership over the last two years!! We have made great strides in increasing membership, with getting members involved and in offering a variety of speakers and topics that were of interest to members of all levels – beginner, intermediate and professional. We tried a lot of new things – some worked, some didn't – but overall, the last two years have been enjoyable, informative and a lot of FUN!

NEW ORLEANS

BY DAWN DINGEE

New Orleans is one of the oldest cities in America. The French Quarter dates back to 1718 and Bourbon Street itself dates back to 1798 when New Orleans was founded by Jean-Baptiste Le Moyne de Bienville. It lies within the French Quarter which spans 13 blocks from Canal Street to Esplanade Avenue. During the day, you can walk down the street freely and will hear music wherever you go. Rick and I recently visited there with a group of 5 friends. One of our stops was The Spotted Cat Music club – a club just outside the French Quarter - and listened to a little Jazz.

Bourbon Street in the French Quarter is known as a favorite place for a bachelor party, birthday party or just a wild night out. It's filled with the best bars, burlesque clubs, music and endless celebration opportunities. What some folks don't know is that it is also rich in history dating back to the early 18th century. The street was named after a French Royal Family which ruled at the time – Rue Bourbon.

At night, Bourbon Street is blocked off from traffic at both ends and this is when the wildness begins. New Orleans has an open-container law which allows pedestrians to walk the streets, cup in hand. Bars and clubs are not required to close so it only gets wilder as the night turns into early morning. Bourbon Street offers something for everyone...for me, it was a little too wild for my taste but it did offer up some lively characters and some very interesting sights to photograph (or not). Some of the local folks who obviously want some attention; don't like to have their picture taken unless they are paid a fee as evidenced by this guy.

Outside of Bourbon Street, you can experience the stunning architecture – mostly the handiwork of the Spanish - which includes balconies with intricate ironwork, lush vegetation and lots of color. The historic Garden District is home to large, extravagant houses that have been well-preserved and contain beautiful gardens and stonework. The Garden District was founded after the signing of the Louisiana Purchase as a settlement for those who didn't want to socialize with those of European descent. Many famous celebrities have been known to live there – Anne Rice, Nicholas Cage and Sandra Bullock to name a few.

CONTINUED

To experience great food and music, another favorite destination is Frenchmen Street. This is known as the "locals Bourbon Street". It features a wide variety of music from jazz to blues to reggae to rock. The day we were there, we stopped into Bamboula's to get a bite to eat and to escape the rain. We ended up staying there for 4 hours until the rain stopped enough for us to venture out once again. Luckily, there was wonderful live jazz music by a group called Cats-n-Heat that kept us entertained, a friendly staff, and plenty of drinks to go around. If you want a taste of Frenchmen Street, watch the movie Chef which stars Jon Favreau.

There are plenty of attractions in and around New Orleans. We opted for the Honey Island Swamp Tour in Slidell, LA where we met Captain Mel. He is extremely knowledgeable and he dispelled any misconceptions about the swamp – two things being it doesn't smell and there are no bugs during the day (the local avian life eat the bugs so they are virtually non-existent during the day and only come out after dusk). This tour is highly recommended if you are ever in the area. We were lucky enough to see two alligators up close.

Lastly, there are plenty of old cemeteries to visit where you can go with a tour guide or you can do a self-walking tour – we chose the latter at the Lafayette Cemetery #1 located in the Garden District. This is the oldest of the seven municipal, city-operated cemeteries in New Orleans. It is a non-segregated, non-denominational cemetery. Most deceased are interred above ground due to the area's high water table and below sea-level elevation. There are 42 cemeteries in and around New Orleans.

Poor Man's Leica ... by Ray Shine

The Leica mystique has an almost magical fascination to avid photo enthusiasts. I can recall first handing a Leicaflex SL at a dealer location in central Massachusetts. A product of the famous Wetzlar firm was unaffordable at the time and I, of course, settled on Pentax Spotmatic as a reasonable alternative.

Now 40 years into the future comes the digital revolution. Great film cameras are now dirt cheap. A Leica SL in excellent condition can be purchased in the $150 price range some even with 6 month warranties.

The SL is the high water mark of Leitz's traditional hand-built manufacturing prowess. What it lacks in aesthetics it more than makes up for in feel and workmanship. As with the M's, nothing superfluous has been added for commercial appeal.

The Leicaflex SL is mechanical simplicity defined, with a heft and feel that makes others seem cheap and flimsy by comparison. Close your eyes and wind on the film and you'll swear you have an M in your hands. Look through the viewfinder and find a size and brightness that puts others to shame with its low light focusing capabilities. Plus you get to use the wonderful, albeit expensive, Leitz lenses.

Both Tamron and Vivitar made interchangeable mounts for Leicaflex, your first lens may be one these low cost alternatives. This Tamron Adaptall zoom can be purchased well under a $100 price tag.
